A NOTE FROM THE ARC

Like many Community Associations, the Sanctuary has a set of written design review standards and processes. Sometimes the architectural requirements can be complex and these guidelines show what is required. State statutes and our governing documents give the association a legal right to enact and enforce these standards.

Some homeowners mistakenly believe that these standards restrict their freedom of individual expression. Actually, they provide a framework within which each homeowner can express individual tastes and preferences. The standards have been developed to reflect a balance between individual rights and the good of the entire association to retain property values. The guidelines spell this out so everyone understands they must comply even if the don't agree.

The ARC has recently completed it's inspections as part of the Annual Review of Lots. We greatly appreciate all of those who have co-operated in this community wide effort.

Please remember to plan ahead for any property improvements you are considering and submit an ARC application for review.

As always, we thank the hardworking resident volunteers on the ARC who devote their valuable time for the betterment of our Community.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

I thought this was an interesting article from the News-Journal and would like to share it with the Community.

A good neighbor is an involved neighbor, written by Gary A and Ryan Poliakoff.

We wanted to spend a moment this week talking about community service, and the way it's changed in the era of shared ownership communities (condos, co-ops and homeowners associations). Today, being neighborly is not what it used to be – it's actually a lot more. In the old days, it was often enough to lend your neighbor a cup of sugar, or to make sure you return their lawnmower. But when you own property together with all of your neighbors, there are a lot of extra responsibilities. For example, someone has to serve on the board. It's a very difficult job, and it's not a great way to make friends, but it's a requirement of shared ownership. In addition, shared ownership works best when owners are extremely active, attending meeting, voicing their opinions and just generally keeping watch over their community. So if you think that you can buy a condo or a home in an HOA and just sit back and relax, think about this – who is it who is going to do all the work? Are you just going to let it sit on your neighbors' shoulders? If so, then it's not really fair to complain when they make a decision you're not happy about. Instead, you should view your community association as a kind of church group or PTA. You may elect representatives to make the big decisions, but without the active input of the rest of the community their decisions will be insulated at best and outright mistakes at the worst. A lot of people think that an HOA or a condo association is something to hate, and that's not true. Community associations can do a lot of great things for a neighborhood, but it takes the involvement of as many owners as possible to make it run properly. The best communities already know what it takes; the worst are falling apart from lack of interest.

Stu Graer

There has been a variety of “sightings” this summer of various rodents, snakes and nests that may inhabit armadillos or raccoons. One way to prevent a problem is to be sure your trash cans have locked down lids when they are placed curbside. And as always, they should be stored in your garage until trash day.

It has been suggested that snakes can be caught by placing sticky rat traps along your home.

ANALYSIS:

2014 was an amazing year for our community- 20 homes sold, compared with 10 in 2013 and 12 in 2012! 2015 is getting off to a great start with 12 sales and 5 pending only halfway through the year.. Currently there are only 4 homes listed, ranging in price from $234,900 to $399,000. Sale prices have also been rising! The average price/sq ft. of all homes sold in 2012 was $102.30/sq.ft. In 2013, the average went up to $114.83, a 12.3% increase in one year!! The average price for 2014 was $118.80 which represents an additional increase of 3.4%. And so far this year in 2015, the average is $128.00!. This is partially due to fewer bank owned or distressed properties on the market. However, buyers are still trying to buy at last year's prices so negotiations are active. Nevertheless, the overall statistics indicate that we are now in a sellers' market, so if you have been waiting, perhaps this is the right time for you! As a proud resident of our community for over 10 years, and sponsor of our community events, I hope that you will give me the opportunity to work for you. Please contact me to discuss all your real estate needs. And please remember to refer me to your neighbors, friends and family! Thank you. Nadine 'Your Sanctuary Team'
